THE TACKLING ORGANISED EXPLOITATION
 (TOEX) PROGRAMME JOB PROFILE
 INTELLIGENCE MANAGER

TOEX Overview:

Criminality involved in the organised exploitation of the vulnerable continues to evolve, and in some cases, thrive. Significant work is already being undertaken by UK law enforcement to tackle organised exploitation such as county lines, human trafficking, modern slavery, child sexual exploitation, organised immigration crime, child sexual abuse, and new, emerging exploitation threats; however, this landscape is complex, and requires a sophisticated solution.

The TOEX programme aims to enhance the local, regional and national response to organised exploitation, as part of a whole systems approach. The programme will deliver this by improving regional intelligence, to inform operational tasking, coordination and capability development; and prioritising limited resources on the highest-harm threats.

By embedding a team within each of the Regional Organised Crime Units (ROCs) across England and Wales the programme seeks to harness existing resources and structures, which will be channelled through our operating model. We seek to achieve a collaborative and more efficient and effective approach, in order to deliver assessments of exploitation threats, help target activity against high-end criminals exploiting the most vulnerable in our society, and at an earlier stage spot patterns and identify new opportunities criminals are seeking to exploit.

Regional Organised Crime Units (ROCU)

This role will be based within one of the Regional Organised Crime Units (ROCU). These units form a critical part of the national policing network, provide a range of specialist policing capabilities to forces which help them to tackle serious and organised crime effectively. These capabilities include undercover policing, specialist surveillance, and cyber-crime investigation.

ROCU investigate and disrupt organised crime groups operating across police force boundaries, additionally they act as an important point of connection between police forces and the National Crime Agency (NCA).

Is the role right for you?

The TOEX Intelligence Manager

-  Lead, manage and direct the day to day operational business of the TOEX intelligence development arm.
-  Be responsible for ensuring that intelligence material is collected, recorded, evaluated and disseminated appropriately with particular focus on vulnerability, risk and harm.
-  Supervise the research and enhancement of information and intelligence supporting the development of 'intelligence products' in line with the TOEX Operating Model.

The TOEX roles are offered on a fixed-term contract basis until March 2025, with start dates planned around April '22 onwards.

We offer a comprehensive induction and professional development programme, which is tailored to your specific skills and experience. If you are an experienced Intelligence Development Officer ready to move into a management role, we feel we can offer you a unique opportunity within our programme.

The role is open to those who already hold the rank of Detective Sergeant or Constables seeking a temporary promotion.

The TOEX Intelligence Manager supervises the collection and development of intelligence - working closely with the Senior Intelligence Analyst to ensure the most effective tasking across the team. The role directly manages the TOEX Intelligence Officers.
